Immigration Reform Now Top of Mind for Many Following the Health Care Consensus

Milwaukee, March 22, 2010: After President Obama's Sunday night victory to a long-running health care reform battle, many immigrant advocacy groups are pushing to put immigration reform at the top of the President's agenda. Yesterday in Washington, thousands of immigrants rallied on the National Mall to urge the President to overhaul the broken immigration system and bring relief to the estimated 12 million undocumented immigrants.

According to Jerry Grzeca, Founding and Managing Partner of Grzeca Law Group, S.C. located in downtown Milwaukee, "The current immigration system has caused immense problems in our country including the separation of families, detainment of innocent children, and rapid increases in ethnic hate crimes." Grzeca adds, "It's time for the millions of individuals who are already here working, paying taxes, and contributing to social security to come out of the shadows and live in a country with an immigration system that is responsive to current economic realities."

Attorney Grzeca will continue to bring this agenda to Capital Hill on Thursday, March 25, 2010 with nearly 300 of his colleagues from the American Immigration Lawyers Association (AILA) to advocate for immediate immigration relief as part of AILA's "National Day of Action 2010".

While in Washington, Attorney Grzeca will meet with various federal legislators to "stop the bleeding" and discuss the reality of the immigration crisis. Grzeca adds, "It is our intent to work with members of Congress to enact a relief package that gives current immigrants the opportunity to earn legal status, provides fair and lawful ways for American businesses to hire much-needed immigrant workers in certain economic sectors, and preserves and restores the fundamental principles of equal protection, while also safe guarding our national security."
